Introduction

Life, according to Sheriek "Reek" Harthorne, is all about who he can have - plain 'n simple. Whether it's sleeping with the forever-love of his life and the mother of his "two kids," Jezai, on a continuous basis; having a one-night "quickie" on deserted roads with his very-defiant back-then lover or whether it's ongoing, sensual love-making with his current companion, his above-everybody-else personality, his arrogance and his clean-cut mien, without a doubt, lures the ones who're closest to him, intimate-wise, back for more and more of what seems to be a natural addictiveness of his aura of distinct sexiness. Nevertheless -- his caring, considerate and giving nature for the less fortunate, especially for the "homeless," defines a totally different character in him because of his volunteered duty to go on a conquest of his own, despite encountering a temporary "road block" along the way, to try and solve a major problem he feels that is dear to his heart and one that he feels is never addressed and tackled hands-on by those whom are blessed with an abundance of wealth like his family is.

In spite of it all, his almost-perfect world and life will partially crumble when a very close-to-home episode strikes him with madness and disappointment. But when his cool-down period sets in, he will divulge the never-seen-it-coming unthinkable to all of those that have grown such a vehement desire and intense passion for him. To make matters even more complicated and disheartening after his shocking admission, his closest bloodline will freak out over the disquieting news.
